

5 TIPS

ABOUT YOUR ROOF

1. CREATE SLOPED ROOFS

First things first, every glass roof requires a minimum slope (approximately 1%). Your glass roof needs to possess a minimum slope so that rainwater can help wash away any dust, leaves, and debris that settle there.

2. REMOVE MOSS AND LEAVES

Perhaps one of the easiest elements of roof maintenance is removing leaves. Removing leaves regularly is not just for aesthetic purposes; leaves collecting near the chimneys, skylights or in roof valleys will collect and retain moisture.

3. CLEAN & MAINTAIN YOUR GUTTERS

Maintaining the gutters is the third item in our maintenance checklist. In order to protect your roof, keep your gutters in great condition. Because they can direct water and debris away from your roof and home foundation.

4. LOOK OUT FOR ICE DAMS

To do it on your own, avoid these common mistakes:

- * Avoid prying it off your roof's surface, once the ice has formed.
- * Do not use a hammer or chisel to hack the ice
- * Do not use ice preventers like salt, potassium, calcium, sodium, or magnesium, they are corrosive to shingles

5. WATCH OUT FOR SHINGLE DAMAGE

Tree branches can keep pushing shingles and loosen them up. Over time, this constant contact can detach the shingles from the roof.

We strongly believe in providing perfect service to our customers.

MAINTENANCE

Regular roof maintenance is essential to extend your roof's lifespan and minimize damage to your home. As an integral component of any building, the roof should be repaired at the first sign of damage to prevent more costly repairs later on.

ROOF INSPECTION

In a roof inspection, a roofer will look for any loose shingles, loose nails or bolts, loose flashing or anything out of place. If they notice anything amiss, they can often repair it on the spot if it's just a matter of something loosening that needs repaired.

QUALITY & PROFESSIONALISM

To be the most trusted and innovative roofing company, committed to delivering top-quality craftsmanship, exceptional customer service, and sustainable roofing solutions that protect and enhance the beauty of every home and building we serve.
